August 27, 2012 - Funai Corporation (President and COO: Ernie Padalino; Headquarters: New Jersey, U.S.), a U.S. Subsidiary of Funai Electric Co., Ltd. (President and CEO: Tomonori Hayashi; Headquarters: Daito-City, Osaka, Japan.), has received the Supplier Collaboration Award in the Entertainment Department for 2012 from Wal-Mart Stores, a U.S. division of Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (Arkansas, U.S.). This annual award recognizes suppliers that have made significant contributions to Wal-Mart's businesses by providing planning, design, manufacturing, shipping, PSI (Purchase, Sales, Inventory), and sales support. Funai was selected for this award out of a pool of over fifty electronics suppliers, and the award represents Funai's ability to overcome the supply chain disruptions stemming from the Great East Japan Earthquake and the flooding in Thailand.

Although this is Funai's first Supplier Collaboration Award, Funai has been awarded the Wal-Mart Supplier of the Year award in 2002, 2004 and 2008. Within this decade, Funai has received the Supplier Award for Excellence for the Quarter nine times, has once received the Billion Dollar Supplier award in 2007 for shipping over a billion dollars worth of product in a single fiscal year, and has also once been named the International Supplier of the Year in 2001, an award given by the international division of Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. to its most outstanding suppliers.

Wal-Mart operates more than 3,500 Wal-Mart discount stores and supercenters throughout the United States. It establishes rigorous standards for quality, price and lead-time to meet the needs of the 127 million customers it serves each week. Wal-Mart's Supplier Collaboration Award recognizes companies that satisfy requirements as a supplier and more. Funai Corporation and the Funai Group started business with Wal-Mart to mutually build trust with customers through improvements in product quality, pricing and lead-time.
